Partnership between HigherEdJobs.com and Interview Exchange Enables Schools to Post Jobs Automatically to HigherEdJobs.com

STATE COLLEGE, PA and WESTBOROUGH, MA (September 2, 2009) – The leading Internet recruitment site for higher education professionals, HigherEdJobs.com, has partnered with Applicant Tracking System provider Interview Exchange. The partnership enables colleges and universities to manage their job postings on HigherEdJobs.com directly through their Interview Exchange account.

Colleges and universities that use both HigherEdJobs.com and Interview Exchange can now integrate their accounts. Once integrated, any jobs these schools post, edit or delete through their Interview Exchange account will be automatically updated on HigherEdJobs.com.

The partnership not only saves institutions time, but ensures accuracy. Jobs get posted to HigherEdJobs.com as soon as they become open and removed once deleted from the school's web site.

Making sure that these job openings get exposure on HigherEdJobs.com is important since the site attracts one of the largest audiences of higher education professionals. The site is now visited over two million times a month.

"From the inception of our company in 1996, we have been committed to applying technology in making the recruitment process easier for colleges and universities," said Eric Blessner, CIO and co-founder of HigherEdJobs.com. "This collaboration is one of the many ways in which we use technology to make posting quicker and more efficient for our customers."

Naray Viswanathan, Ph.D., President at Interview Exchange remarked, "We are dedicated to providing industry leading solutions and unparalleled support to our customers. This new partnership between Interview Exchange and HigherEdJobs.com with complete job-posting integration is a great value-add to our current and new higher education customers."
