HigherEdJobs.com and PeopleAdmin Partnership Allows Colleges and Universities to Automatically Post Jobs to HigherEdJobs.com

STATE COLLEGE, PA (May 27, 2008) – A partnership between industry leaders HigherEdJobs.com and PeopleAdmin, Inc. simplifies the process for colleges and universities to connect with more job seekers. In one integration step, an institution with a PeopleAdmin account can now reach beyond its PeopleAdmin-supported Web site to automatically post job openings to HigherEdJobs.com as well.

As institutions post, edit or delete job postings to their school Web sites through PeopleAdmin, all changes are updated on HigherEdJobs.com, saving time and ensuring that all job opportunities reach a national audience. Additionally, to stop advertising a job opening, a school simply removes the posting from its Web site and the position automatically disappears from HigherEdJobs.com, a valuable feature that prevents the submission of applications to positions that have already been filled.

“This partnership is a great move for both the job seekers and employers who use HigherEdJobs.com,” said John Ikenberry, president of HigherEdJobs.com. “Because of our partnership with PeopleAdmin, job seekers will be able to search an even greater range of faculty, administrator and executive opportunities on HigherEdJobs.com. And, employers will be able to automatically list their job postings on HigherEdJobs.com without lifting a finger.”

Added Jeff Carpenter, chief executive officer of PeopleAdmin: “Our company strives to make it easier for colleges and universities to streamline their human resources efforts. This agreement with HigherEdJobs.com eliminates the need to manually post the same job openings in multiple locations. Now the system can do that automatically after some simple setup and institutions can focus on other priorities.”
